"Palliative" (pa-lē-ā-tiv) means to relieve or reduce pain and discomfort. The goal of palliative care is to prevent and relieve suffering, and to support the best possible quality of life for patients and their families, regardless of their stage of disease or the need for other therapies, in accordance with their values and preferences.

Palliative Care

- provides relief from pain and other symptoms
- comforts whether one has years, months or days to live
- is appropriate at any age
- helps with the emotional and spiritual needs of patients and families
- affirms life and regards dying as a normal process
- neither hastens nor postpones death
- offers a support system to help patients live as actively as possible as long as possible
- offers a support system to help the family cope during the patient’s illness and in their own grieving

"One of the hardest things in life is to watch a loved one suffer and feel an overwhelming sense of helplessness. Through palliative care the suffering and helplessness are replaced with a calming sense of peacefulness for both the patient and family."

Palliative Care Service

A palliative care team provides services from many different health care professionals for patients with life-limiting illnesses.

Palliative care services may be provided by:

- Hospitals
- Hospices
- Nursing homes
- Home health agencies

The team has special training in managing pain and other symptoms, and can help patients and families face difficult decisions.

For those not in the hospital, a palliative care service may be available to outpatients. The team can coordinate services with many other care providers such as home health agencies, hospices, and nursing homes. This service coordination provides extra support to patients and their families after they leave the hospital.

- Providing information and support regarding home care, skilled nursing, and hospice care
